Breast prostheses: new measuring procedure for fitting partial breast forms

Amoena (Raubling, Germany) have extended their portfolio of balancing breast forms and partial breast shapers. There are new additions to the Contact, Natura and Essential lines, with names that have been brought into line with those of the complete prostheses. In order to help specialist advisers, the fitting for partial breast forms has been simplified through the use of their 'differential cup' method for taking measurements. This approach to sizing is quick to learn and can be used with the new prosthetic cups Balance Oval and Balance Delta.

At the same time, Amoena will be presenting their new 1S<sup>N</sup> prosthetic form at OTWorld. The new breast form will be launched as Natura Xtra Light. The 1S<sup>N</sup> form is different from the well-known 1S form, in that it has a shorter run-off in the upper part, with a very gentle transition towards the edge of the breast. The reverse side is more concave – so as to fit more snugly against the body.
