Orthotech Aktiv-Plus for diabetes and rheumatism sufferers

The new Orthotech Aktiv-Plus, which Orthotech (Gauting-Stockdorf, Germany) are exhibiting at OTWorld, meets all the requirements of a prophylactic shoe. The sport and leisure shoe is designed for patients with diabetes or rheumatism. The larger volume at the front of the shoe protects against pressure points whilst, at the same time, offering the necessary grip and support for the loads generated in sporting activities. Its construction relies on high-quality materials and the consistent avoidance of seams. Inner and outer soles encourage correct foot roll-off, so as to protect joints. The aim of this type of prophylactic shoe is, for instance, to avoid pressure points for diabetes sufferers and to prevent consequent damage, such as diabetic foot syndrome.
